The Stardust Engine

Book 1: CPI & The Forgers
    Chapter 1: Into the Unknown
Book 2: The Crash of ’90
    Chapter 1: The Arrival
Book 3: The Friction Catastrophe
    Chapter 1: Revelations
Book 4: Ad Astra
    Chapter 1: Escape Velocity – 1995
        The Magnum Opus – 12:00 PM
Book 5: The $150M Refusal
    Chapter 1: A Desperate Escape

Book 1: CPI & The Forgers

Chapter 1: Into the Unknown

Book 2: The Crash of ’90

Chapter 1: The Arrival

Book 3: The Friction Catastrophe

Chapter 1: Revelations

Book 4: Ad Astra

Chapter 1: Escape Velocity – 1995

The Magnum Opus – 12:00 PM

Part 1: The Magnum Opus – 12:00 PM

The “Magnum Opus” and the grand finale of the Hard Reset double album. This monumental 15-minute and 33-second progressive rock epic was originally written and recorded in 1995, during the financial struggle of the band’s “Wilderness Years” (a full year before the 1996 lottery windfall). It is entirely Cassidy O’Connell’s creation—she wrote the music, penned the lyrics, and directed her family through the complex arrangement.

The four-movement suite serves as her autobiography, charting her visceral escape from the trauma of the 1992 ‘Friction’ trial (“The Cage”) to the transcendence of total artistic freedom (“The Cosmos”). The track features a distinct “mechanical cutoff” sound between Part II and Part III; this wasn’t a studio effect, but Ryan O’Connell physically pulling the plug on his guitar amplifier mid-recording to simulate the violent silence of a rocket’s Main Engine Cutoff (MECO). By including the full suite on the 1997 release, the band ensures Cassidy’s defining artistic statement finally reaches the global audience it always deserved.

---

Part 2: The Cinematic Universe – 2017

Twenty years later, in 2017, the O'Connell family used the vast resources of the Forger Nation Trust to fully fund and produce a science fiction feature film titled K.N.O.X. Alongside producing the film, The Stardust Engine composed the official Industrial/Score soundtrack.

In the film's narrative, The Stardust Engine portrays an in-universe band forced by the oppressive Telsan Axiom corporation to perform a residency of shows in Port Telsus—a gritty, miserable collection of rusting platforms and biodomes situated on a massive geological formation rising 16 kilometers above the ocean. To survive the toxic mix of ozone, synth-fuel, and rot in the port's air, the band must wear Axiom-patented filter masks while playing in the neon-lit Cross-Way market.

During these forced performances, the band plays the full 15-minute suite of Escape Velocity (Ad Astra). However, it isn't just a performance; the song acts as a coded transmission broadcast directly from Port Telsus. The track's distinct sonic shifts are actually encoded navigational coordinates sent to the native resistance fighters hidden 1.5 to 3 kilometers high in the canopy of the Weave. The broadcast aids the real "Knox"—not the heavy-set, scarred male veteran the Axiom believes they are hunting, but the symbiotic trio of Kael, Anya, and Pip—in their fight against corporate oppression.

Book 5: The $150M Refusal

Chapter 1: A Desperate Escape